FOREIGN LAND

Robert Louis Stevenson

FOREIGN LANDS

by Robert Louis Stevenson

Up into the cherry tree

Who should climb but little me?

I held the trunk with both my hands

And looked abroad on foreign lands.

I saw the next-door garden lie,

Adorned with flowers, before my eye,

And many pleasant places more

That I had never seen before.

STANZA 3

I saw a dimpling river pass
And be the sky's blue looking-glass;
The dusty roads go up and down
With people tramping in to town.

VOCABULARY

Dimpling – bubbling

Looking-glass – mirror

Tramping – walking

In this stanza, the poet sees the dimpling river passing by and he compares the river to the sky's blue looking mirror. He could also see people walking to the town through the dusty roads.

Changing your Tomorrow

If I could find a higher tree farther and farther I should see,
to where the grown-up river slips
into the sea among the ships,

To where the roads on either hand
Lead onward into fairy land,
Where all the children dine at five,
And all the playthings come alive.
