Georgie and his mother lived in a village near the forest. Although they were poor, they were very happy. As winter set in, cold winds had started blowing. Georgie realized that unless someone went to the forest, they would not get any firewood to keep the hut warm. Since his mother was sick, Georgie decided to go alone. He worked hard till afternoon. He soon felt tired. He decided to rest under the tree. Though Georgie craved for the berries, he did not eat them. He felt that if he gave them to his mother, she would be happy. So he packed the berries in a leaf and started for home. He kept them safe till he reached home.
