

The old Aubigny was Armand Aubigny's father and in contrast with his son, he was liberal and kind to his negroes. The negroes were also happy with his reign and had an indulgent lifetime, he also didn't punish them so severely.