Shankar's meeting with the lion was totally unexpected. He had only closed the door but hadn't bolted it. When he saw the lion, he froze with fear and panic; completely unarmed except just an wooden pulley - but he was just there like waiting for the lion to take it's move before doing anything. As the lion would feel threatened and attack him but in contrast with Shankar's response, the lion was only curious at the ketorene lamp and Shankar and quietly went away as if disinterested in what he saw.
