

The new girl being a bit different from the other pupils got unwanted attention and solace. She was mostly isolated from them and though everybody wanted to know how her left hand never moved and other things, they would perter the narrator about it which resulted in misunderstanding and fear of negligence in the mind of the new girl. Everyone would stare at her and talk about her so much so that she stood hidden from their sight at a corner even in the playground.