A Amazing incident

I was travelling in a train from Delhi to Mumbai and by luck met a man in the same coach, he was old to stand the train. I therefore offered him my seat. He thanked me and said that he was a engine driver every day.

I was much amazed, I asked if he is retired or not he just smiled and nodded his head. It meant yes, he told me that it was due to a accident he loses his job. he said "I am a colour blind person from the beginning, but it was too hard to take part in the railways service. So, I applied for it at that time I lied that I wasn't a colour blind and got a job. when I was asked for a trial I gave and passed out.

On my first day was driving a train at that time I couldn't identify the red signal and was about to crash with another train but I was saved.

I was taken to the hospital and after that I was carried to the office there I had to give answer to my higher officers but I could not. So I was devised out."

He gave a sigh of relief. I saw that there were tears in his eyes he muttered to himself "If I didn't feel that way". The train stopped and he went out from it and vanished within the counsel of people. I stared at him until he vanished.
