

Q. What do you know about the drainage system of the Indus Valley civilization

The town planners had devised a very good drainage system. The drains were so laid out that the water from bathing areas and kitchen drained into narrow drains which later joined into larger drains.

Drains had a gradual slope to ensure flow of water.

The drains along the main roads were covered and