Whitewashing the Fence

Let us read a story about a little boy who used his wit and intelligence to get out of a tedious task his aunt wanted him to do. Some words are highlighted.

Saturday morning was come, and all the summer world was bright and fresh, and brimming with life. There was a song in every heart; and if the heart was young the music issued at lips. There was cheer in every face and a spring in every step. The locust trees were in bloom and the fragrance of the blossoms filled the air. Cardiff Hill, beyond the village and above it, was green with vegetation and it lay just far enough away to seem a delectable land, dreamy, reposeful, and inviting. Tom appeared on the sidewalk with a bucket of whitewash and a long-handled brush. He surveyed the fence, and all gladness left him and a deep melancholy settled down upon his spirit. Thirty yards of board fence nine feet high. Life to him seemed hollow and existence but a burden. Sighing, he dipped his brush and passed it along the topmost plank; repeated the operation; did it again; compared the insignificant whitewashed streak with the far-reaching continent of unwhitewashed fence, and sat down on a tree box discouraged.

Dear Rakesh,

~~Hope this letter finds you in good health.~~

Hope this letter finds you in good health. I and mother and father want you to come here to Kolkata during Durga Puja celebrations. Your presence will make all of us happy and we all will have fun together.

Yours affectionately,
Ansuman.
