

Q. Birds are winged creatures. An ostrich cannot fly in spite of having wings. Why?

A. Unlike most birds, their flat breast bones lack the keel that ~~is~~ anchors the strong pectoral muscles required for flight. Their puny wings can't possibly lift their heavy bodies off the ground.