

Q. There are activities that help in the development of the primary and secondary sector are called tertiary activities. These activities are different from the primary or secondary sector activities. These activities by themselves do not produce a good but they are an aid or support for the production transported by trucks or trains and then sold in wholesale and retail shops. These transportation facilities and shopkeepers come under the tertiary sector. They do not produce goods but play a very important role in selling and bringing these goods to the market.

12. No, this is not a correct statement. The tertiary sector plays a significant role in the development of the Indian Economy. In the year 2003, the tertiary sector replaced the primary sector as the most producing sector in the country. A few reasons to support that are given below.

1. The primary and secondary sectors can blow up if the tertiary sector is there to support them.
2. The tertiary sector is also a lot of the national income of the country.
3. Education, which is the basis of everything comes under the tertiary sector. A person working as a teacher comes under tertiary sector.
4. This sector provides the maximum employment opportunities to the people of the country.
5. Services sector in India employs two different types of people then are:
Highly skilled labour including teachers, bankers & officers etc. These people are permanently employees.

2. Least Skilled people Labour which includes vendors, electricians, plumbers etc. These people are not permanently employed.