Dear Diary,

It's only a month from today for the half-yearly exams to start. The previous terminale had not been a great success for me. I must plan properly if I want to do it nicely this time and wash away the blemish of my previous scoring. I have made a provision in my time-table for an increase in the duration of self-study for every subject from tomorrow onwards. Science and history have been a sore to my results, hence I must give them at least 2 hours each day to finish the syllabus before time, and I think taking person coaching for my difficulties in these two subjects will also help. Usually, I get up early so, there is no change in the morning time-table. Though, I have started to study till midnight for a better score.
