

16/7/21

(13) Service sector in India employs 2 different kinds of people. Who are these?

Ans - Service sector in India employs 2 different types of people. These people are * Highly skilled labour, which includes teachers, bankers, IT officials etc. These people are permanently employed.

* Less skilled labour, which includes vendors, electricians, plumbers etc. These people are not permanently employed.

(14) Workers are exploited in the unorganised sector.

Ans - The unorganised sector is characterised by small & scattered units which are largely the control of the govt. There are rules & regulations but these are not followed. Jobs here are low paid & not regular.

★ Hence it correct to say that workers are exploited in the unorganised sector because more work is taken from them in comparison to what they are paid.

(15) How are the act in the economy classified on the basis of employment condition.

Ans Organised Sector - Enterprises registered under the govt. of India,

Unorganised Sector - small & scattered units which are temporary

(16) Compare the employment conditions prevailing in the organised & un-organised sectors.

Ans- In the organised sector, the employees are given higher wages, medical facilities, a healthy working environment and their jobs are permanent.

(17) Explain the objective of complementing the NREGA 2005

Ans- The National Rural Employment Guarantee Act, 2005 was introduced with an aim to ensure guarantee 100 days of employment in a year to all those who are in need of work. It also states that in the case of employment not being provided under this act,