The roots of the weeds go deep into the soil. They, if not pulled out, wrap their roots around the neighboring plants and grow on them destroying them in the process. Since the roots are deep the gardener has to apply force in order to pull them out.