Safe Diwali

Diwali is one of the most important festivals in Hindu culture. It is known as the festival of lights that spreads cheer and joy among people but it has long been associated with bursting crackers. Still it can be celebrated with happiness if we all stay at home lighting up candles and diya filling up our life with the victory of light over darkness. Bursting of firecrackers releases harmful gases to the atmosphere which results in pollution. We must keep in mind that festivals have been made to fill our life with joy but not to destroy our surroundings in the name of celebration. Stay safe and happy, and may this diwali fill your life with light and joy.

Dear Diary,

Today I have been to my friend's house and while returning to my home I saw a huge crowd of people standing there I felt something serious must have happen when I went near to that crowd I saw 2 people badly injured with many scratches on their body. I was really scared by looking at them. They both were taken to the nearest hospital and treated but I could not forget that incident and I related the whole incident in front of my parents. They suggested me that wash driving on the road can cause these accidents and insisted me to stay alert and careful while driving. Later I had a good sleep and also tried to forget that incident.
