5) Describe the federal structure of Indian Democracy?

Ans. i) The Indian constitution provides for a federal structure of government.

ii) It distributed powers among three levels of government - government at the state or regional level and at the local level (Panchayati Raj) iii) Each level has been assigned separate areas of subjects. There are three lists. (a) The union list (b) the state list (c) the concurrent list.

iv) The union list consists of 98 subjects for example defence, foreign affairs and finance, state list has about 59 subjects include police, health, sanitation and agriculture. The concurrent list has 52 subjects like education, electricity, labour welfare, etc.

v) The union list includes subjects of ~~state~~ ^{national} and ~~local~~ importance and the ^{union} state government alone can make laws ~~over~~ related to the subject in union list.

vi) The state list contains subjects of state and local importance and the state government alone can make laws over it.

vii) Concurrent list includes subjects of common interests to both union and state government and both of them can make laws.
