Q2 Why do developed countries invest in developing countries?

6) developed countries invest in the developing countries because in the developing countries the market grows very fast and their countries invest in them for the capturing of the market by the companies of the developed countries.

It is true that the impact of globalisation has not been uniform on employment and real wages. Due to ushering in of new technological output increases, but employment opportunities are not so much especially in rural areas, where over 60% of the population live

8) Postwar trade led to integration of markets across countries, for the ~~as~~ equalization of the trade across to developing countries
