Narrate Shankar's meeting with the snake.

One night, Shankar, who was sleeping, suddenly woke up. The room was pitch dark. Shankar felt his whole body trembling. There was a faint noise in the room. He found the torch and he flashed it on. Instantly, he froze, numb with fear and awe. Midway between the wall and his bed, there stood the Africa's meanest and most fearsome snake, the black mamba. This was not unusual because a black mamba usually strikes on the shoulders. To escape from a black mamba is like being born again, Shankar had heard. He never lost his head when he was in danger. With his cleverness and patience, Shankar helped him out of the snake's trouble and saved his life.
