Q) Write a character sketch of Albert Einstein as given in the chapter "A Truly Beautiful Mind".

ans: He has been portrayed as a great intellectual genius and a peace-loving human being with liberal ideas. As an intellectual, he created many formulae in physics. He showed the sparks of genius even at a young age. His miserable years at school revealed how a talented creative mind feels trapped and cloistered in the rigid system of education. The classroom had no place for individual aspirations, brilliance or aptitude. It discouraged Albert's genius and originality. He has an enquiring mind and a curious nature. He had a thirst for information and he liked to study books on science. He loved music and played his violin regularly. Albert had a thirst for information and he liked to study books on science. He loved music and played his violin regularly. Albert had a frank and honest temperament and was quite sensitive and emotional. He was considered a rebel by most of his teachers. He did not compromise and adjust to the system of education which encouraged learning without understanding. For him, ideas and enquiry were more important than facts or dates. He was expelled from school for his views which did not match the existing pattern.
