Dear diary,

Today around 7am in the morning I thought of going for a small walk near the park to freshen up, but as I was heading over there grey dark clouds started forming in the sky, as I thought it was about to rain it started raining heavily, I quickly headed home drenched in cold water, by the time I headed home I had already got a cold which ruined my day even more this day couldn't get any worse. After a few hours thankfully the rain stopped but by the time it did it was already noon and so I couldn't get my morning stroll.
