

Hue
15.7.2021

Bubbles appear when you open the bottle of soda, but not when a bottle of mineral water. Why?

ans → This happens so because soda contains carbon dioxide with high pressure the pressure is released by opening the soda container, as the liquid cannot hold as much carbon dioxide, so the bubbles come out of the solution. It does not happen in the case of mineral water because it does not ^{contains} ~~have~~ carbon dioxide on it.