Importance of Trees

— By Yash

“Take care of the trees,

They will take care of you.”

Trees are very important, valuable and necessary to our existence as they have furnished us with two important life essentials; food and oxygen. Apart from basically keeping us alive, there are many other little and big benefits we get from trees. So, trees are vital resources for the survival of all living beings.

Trees play a significant role in cleaning the environment. During photosynthesis, trees take away the unwanted carbon dioxide. In return, they supply the oxygen that is needed for breathing. Also, trees protect the land from different natural calamities. Trees also used to provide materials to create a cover for ~~protective~~ protecting the soil. When it is hot, human beings and animals look for an old tree that can provide shade. Trees are essential for creating living places for many animals as well as birds. They contribute to making the world ~~the way~~ what it is by creating the flora and the earth's fauna.

The importance of trees cannot be underrated. They are essential to humans, animals and the environment. They are source of clean drinking, clean air to breathe, and food to both human beings and animals. With civilization and development in technology, people use trees to do most of their daily activities. They build houses using trees; create paper, furniture poles and more. Trees control climate by moderating the effects of the sun, rain and wind. So, deforestation leads to unusual hot weather conditions, air pollution, etc. We should make an emotional connection with the ~~big~~ trees we plant that we see everyday.

These strong bonds eventually grow and there are lots of organization across the country, to protect and save the trees.
